

Orientation to AdvanceMed Hanford

Welcome to Hanford! As a new Hanford worker you may be having an exam at AdvanceMed Hanford (AMH). We perform new hire exams, as well as medical monitoring and qualifying exams for Hanford workers. We also provide return to work evaluations, occupational primary care, basic first aid services, Employee Assistance and Health Education/Wellness programs.

Your first visit to AMH may be for a new hire drug test. During this visit we may ask you to complete some paperwork in advance of your exam. This will expedite the process when you arrive for your initial exam. If we do not provide you the paperwork at that time, or the drug testing occurs at another location, please complete the Initial Occupational Health History located on this website and bring it with you to your scheduled exam.

Your employer or prime contractor will schedule you for an exam if required for the work you are to perform. Your responsibility is to arrive on time, bring a completed copy of the Initial Occupational Health History with you to your appointment and be aware of your rights and responsibilities (brochure available on this website and in the AMH lobby). AMH may be unable to see you if you arrive late for your appointment. If you need to reschedule your appointment you will be rescheduled based on AMH appointment availability.

You may have additional forms to complete after you arrive at AMH depending on your scheduled testing and medical programs. Your exam and testing will be based on the Employee Job Task Analysis (EJTA) completed by your employer or contractor. EJTA's include information about potential hazards, medical qualifications, physical job demands, and essential job functions. When you arrive for your exam you will be given a customized report that tells you about the exams and testing you are scheduled to receive.

If you have previously worked at Hanford or another DOE Site where you had a potential exposure to beryllium you may be eligible for beryllium medical monitoring during your upcoming Hanford employment. After you start working please call AMH Beryllium Case Management at 376-6000 for more information. If you elect to enroll in the AMH previous beryllium exposure program you will be offered a beryllium exam within twelve months.
